

I am very disturbed by the FCC's plan to allow further consolidation of media ownership. Such a change in rules is likely to reduce competition and diversity among various information and news outlets. I believe the greatest strength of the US is its diversity, and the proposed new rules will likely make our news outlets much more uniform, a rather anti-democratic change.

I urge the FCC to oppose this change, and, furthermore, to break up the media conglomerates that already now own too many radio and TV stations.
